

Dear All,

As we learned with great sadness, Professor Yang Xiaokai passed away on 7 July 2004 after fighting against lung cancer for nearly three years. Professor Yang is survived by his wife Xiaojuan and three children. In order to support the family he left behind, we call upon you to make generous donations. Your donations can be sent directly to Xiaojuan. Please make checks payable to Xiaojuan Wu.

Ms. Xiaojuan Wu (Mrs. Yang),
Address: 8 Sutton Ct., Burwood East, VIC 3151, Australia.
Tel: 61-3-98879213
Email: xiaojuanwu@yahoo.com

This donation is intended to provide financial assistance to his three children to pay for their educational costs. To serve the wish of Xiaokai that his children can continue their education, we call upon you to make generous donations.

Also, in order to carry on the unfinished research project pursued by Professor Yang, Monash University will set up a fund in his honour. The Fund is intended to provide financial support to continue Xiaokai's research agenda. This support may take the form of scholarships for research students, research grants, a Memorial Award, and/or a Memorial Lecture, as well as subsidies to the Inframarginal Society (including the cost of maintaining the website of the Society) and the new journal established by Xiaokai. Its objective will be to advance research into New Classical Economics (or Inframarginal Economics) pioneered by Professor Yang. We now call upon you to contribute generously toward this Memorial Fund.

While there have been many enquiries about these two funds regarding their purposes and tax implications, we would like to make the following clarification. According to the Australian taxation law, contribution to the Memorial Fund is tax deductible. But money placed in this fund cannot be used for private purpose such as paying for educational costs of Xiaokai's children. Hence if you wish to help Xiaokai's family, please send your donation directly to Xiaojuan (Mrs. Yang). However, such donation is not tax deductible.

For all contributions to the Memorial Fund, please send to Ms. Cora Ng at the following address:
